Minda announces new Executive Manager People and Culture

The Board of Minda – South Australia’s leading provider of services for people with an intellectual disability – is delighted to announce the appointment of Lorraine Johnston to the new position of Executive Manager People and Culture.

This exciting new role reports directly to Cathy Miller, Minda’s Chief Executive Officer and will be integral in driving change and developing programs and processes across Minda to create a positive and sustainable workplace culture.

Chair of the Minda Board Tony Harrison said: “Lorraine brings a wealth of experience to Minda from senior positions in human resource management, occupational health, payroll, industrial relations, organisational development, business development, change management and corporate services.

Lorraine has worked for a diverse range of organisations such as Health Workforce Australia, Cancer Council SA, Flinders Medical Centre, Arts SA, Naracoorte Health Service Inc and Kingston Soldiers Memorial Hospital. She holds a Masters of Business Administration (MBA) and a Bachelor of Management (Employee Relations).

“Minda’s Brighton Master Plan project embodies our aspirations of continuing to provide world-leading services that deliver extraordinary outcomes to improve the lives of the people we support,” Mr Harrison said.

“By nurturing a positive and sustainable workplace culture at Minda, we can retain the best people from within the community services sector, and attract amazing expertise from the Corporate and Public sectors into the not-for-profit sector.

“Our people are the heart of Minda and together and together, we can realise Minda’s dream of putting Australia on the global map for the provision of cutting edge disability services, and create an environment where people with an intellectual disability are empowered with choice about what they want for their life: now and in the future,” Mr Harrison said.

“On behalf of the Minda Board, we welcome Lorraine’s passion and understanding for the sector into our dynamic and dedicated Minda Executive team.”
